Course Description
What is to be done in order to situate and perform a dramatic literature in a certain public arena? This course examines how thematic variations in theatre and literature convey new meanings through different styles of performance. Specifically, we will look at the ways in which the image of Asia or the theme of “Asianness” have been manipulated and consumed through contemporary (Western/American) literature, plays, musicals, and other versions of popular culture. We will also discuss to what extent literature and theatrical performance can be a cross-cultural, ethnographic representation. And more broadly, through different genres of culture/art such as novels, essays, musical theatre, and film, we will explore how the notion of “Asia” and/or “Asian-America” has been received and consumed in American contemporary pop culture.
